We Came to Make Restaurant Profit Less Random.

Kutlerri was built by people who know what a real growth system looks like - and got close enough to restaurants to know they've never had one.

The Kutlerri Story

We came from sales. We understood growth. Pipelines, conversion rates, revenue motions. How to find an opportunity and run it consistently until the number moves.

What we didn't expect was that the most broken growth problem we'd ever encounter was in restaurants.

It started with someone we cared about. We watched them work - opening shifts, closing shifts, vendor calls, staffing fires. The food was good. The regulars came back. By every visible measure, the restaurant was working.

But the numbers told a different story. And when we asked why, the answer was always some version of I think, or probably, or let me check the reports.

The reports never gave a straight answer either.

We started talking to more operators. Fast casual owners. Multi-location teams. Restaurants doing three million dollars a year, running hard, stuck at the same margin year after year. Same pattern every time. Scattered data. Delayed signals. Decisions made on feel because the facts arrived too late to act on.

Profit felt random. Like something that happened to them, not something they controlled.
That bothered us. So we built Kutlerri.

Starting with catering - the cleanest win on the board. Then the next lever. And the next.
The goal has never changed: make profit less random.

Vision

Restaurants are run by people who pour everything into their work. Early mornings, late nights, decisions that never stop. They deserve a business that works as hard as they do. Our vision is simple: every operator we work with goes home knowing their numbers, owning their growth, and building something that lasts.

Mission

Our mission is to turn restaurant data into decisions. Not reports that arrive too late. Not dashboards that raise more questions than they answer. Real answers that show up on time, point at the right problem, and come with a clear path to fix it.

Our Kulture

Customer Over Everything

If it's our comfort vs the customer's time, money, or stress, the customer takes priority.

Build the Machine

Heroics are temporary. Systems are how we win and scale.

Ship. Learn. Fix. Repeat.

Progress > perfection, as long as we fix fast and learn every time. Activity is NOT equal to progress.

Default Driver Mode

If you see it and touch it, you are the driver until it works and not until your part is done.

One Team, Zero Ego

Titles and functions are secondary, Kutlerri wins together, or not at all.
